About ProxyMate

Making friends has always been defined as an art but we refuse to believe that only a few people excel at it. Recently, the lancet survey has yielded that covid-19 led to a 25.6% increase in anxiety clutter among people. As we were faced with the uncertainty of the unknown, the walls of isolation grew thicker around us, and by drinking three cups of coffee and sleeping immediately, we went off track with social interactions and mental health. So we introduce Proxymate, a software which aids you in making friends, additionally with a safe corner to vent out to random proxymitters and send letters to people in its vicinity just like good-old-days!

Objectives

Our main motive to design this software is to help people tackle hesitancy, social anxiety, and loneliness which creep in as they think about meeting new people. As people, who have gone through the phases of depression and uncertainty, we want other people to have someone they can lean on, someone they could vent out to, and someone they feel safe with.

We are also introducing two revolutionary and exclusive features called "Count on ME" and "ComfortMail"!

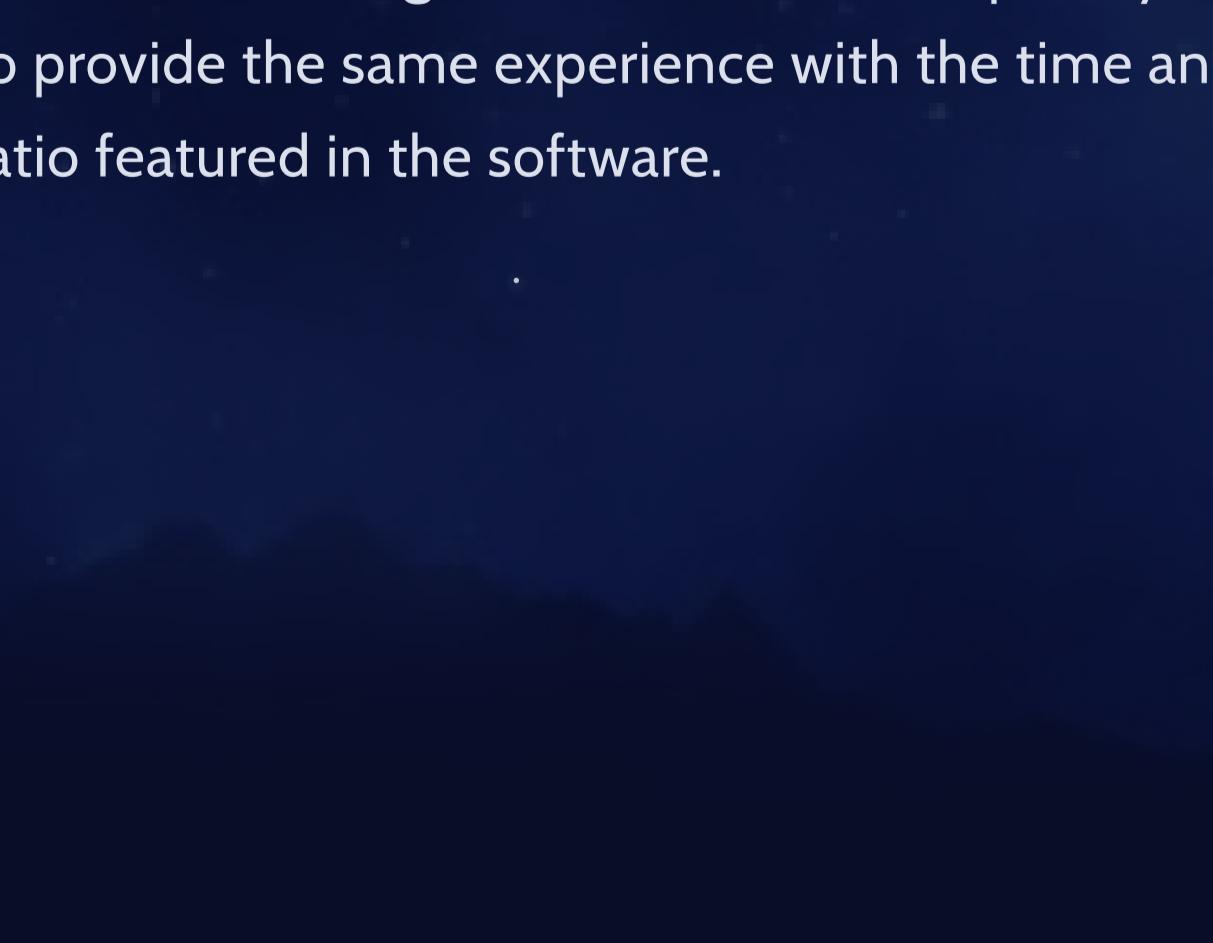

How It Works

So here's how it works: the main server lets you make individual profiles and matches you on the similarity of your spotify profile, the kind of music you like and similar interests. Further, if everything goes well, you have a new friend. We believe the first steps are the hardest and while we are always looking for friends, sometimes all we need is an ear, so additionally, we introduce two different features created just to make the software a safe and comfortable place.

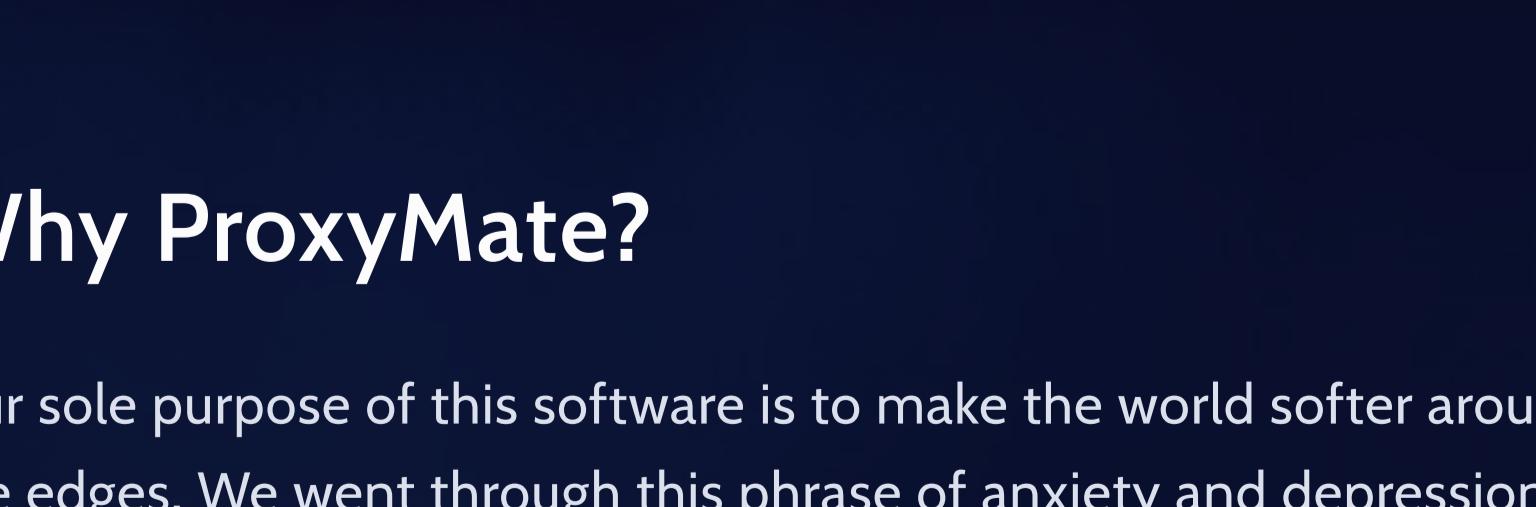

Comfort Mail

The 'comfort mail' where it allows you to send a digital letter to a stranger-while matching your interests- around its vicinity. We know the fading of letters is a sad reality and we can't bring its ethics back but hopefully, we will try to provide the same experience with the time and distance ratio featured in the software.

Count On Me

The first is 'count on me' which it connects you with a random stranger for you to have a safe and non-judgemental venting corner, an ear for when the thoughts in your mind are heavy.

Why ProxyMate?

Our sole purpose of this software is to make the world softer around the edges. We went through this phrase of anxiety and depression and we don't want any of us to tackle the mental issues alone. We know how it feels to eat alone at a table but, not anymore. We want you to be a little kinder today, a little bolder, and knock on a friend's door. Maybe they are thinking about you too.
